MUSEUM OF ART HAS GUIDED TOURS OF INDIAN ART EXHIBITIONS

On three Sundays in November members of The Cleveland Museum of Art's education staff will conduct guided tours (gallery talks) of the Museum's special exhibitions of Indian art. The gallery talks begin at 1:30 pm and are free. Other free events which are part of the Festival of India are also scheduled.

On November 3 the tour will be in the galleries of The Twain Shall Meet exhibition, which shows works of art illustrating exchanges of influence between Eastern and Western civilizations. Visitors may also see a free film at 3:00 pm, The Music Room, directed by the Indian film master, Satyajit Ray.

On November 10 the gallery talk will be in the Sacred India exhibition, an educational exhibition designed to explain the religious imagery of Indian art. Another free film by Ray, Dēvi (The Goddess), will be shown at 3:00 pm.

On November 17 the gallery tour will be of the major exhibition of Indian sculpture organized by the Museum, Kushan Sculpture: Images of Early India. At 3:00 pm Dr. Gritli von Mitterwallner of the University of Munich will give a lecture on "Kushan Kings: Coins and Sculptures."

Other free gallery talks and lectures are scheduled throughout the week. For information about them, call The Cleveland Museum of Art, Department of Public Information, 421-7340.
